

Manual Handling can be Healthy

Presenters:

Michael Lawrance, JointAction

Manual handling in the workplace is often seen in a negative sense and physical activities are replaced with the aim of safeguarding the workplace. This session will demonstrate that manual handling, whether loading your body at work or the gym, can be healthy or unhealthy depending on the task, the person and the circumstances. The presentation will look at the prevention of musculoskeletal injuries in the workplace.

Workshop participants will receive a free licence for the Move Time program. Details available at www.move-time.com

Pauline Rooney, WorkPlace - EZ

After many years of working with injured office workers, athletes, school teachers, students and aged care workers, Pauline developed the Officise Made Easy Program.

The program is simple, takes minimal time, and is designed to aid in keeping the body fit, flexible, relaxed and stress free. It will give time back to the time poor, protect the body, strengthen the core muscle groups, provide greater clarity of mind and increase productivity whilst reducing fatigue.
